New Partnership Between Agencies Saves Tax Dollars

Constitutional Officers merge administrative function

A new partnership is beginning between two State Constitutional Officers, State Treasurer Converse Chellis and Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers. In a continued effort to explore ways of saving tax dollars and making government work more efficiently and effectively, the State Treasurer's Office and the South Carolina Department of Agriculture are merging their Human Resource Departments, reducing staff and saving thousands of taxpayer dollars.

"We are changing the way state government thinks about conducting its very basic operations," said Treasurer Converse Chellis.

SCDA and Wal-Mart Promote Certified SC Grown Produce

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture (SCDA) and Wal-Mart are partnering to promote locally grown produce at Wal-Mart stores across South Carolina. The announcement was made at kick-off events held at the Lexington, Greenville, and North Charleston Wal-Marts. Standing atop crates of fresh, SC produce, Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, thanked Wal-Mart for the company's support and explained to customers the benefits of buying local.

"We are fortunate to have an abundance of agricultural resources here in South Carolina, especially our produce farms," said Weathers. "We are also fortunate that a leading retailer like Wal-Mart recognizes the importance of providing locally grown produce to consumers," he added. "Buying locally grown is the basis of sustainability. Not only does it keep a little of the grocery money close to where we live, supporting the family farm and the community's economy, but it also helps save on the cost of energy because locally grown travels less distance."

Independence Day ... Independence Attitude

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable, Rights that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.

Over 230 years ago our nation's Founding Fathers gathered to sign one of the most important documents in history. The words that laid the foundation for our country were written in the Declaration of Independence more than two centuries ago and still hold true even today. I have walked through Independence Hall in Philadelphia and tried to imagine what they must have felt. Maybe that comes from the fact that fourteen signers of the Declaration were farmers. After all, farmers are known for planting seeds and taking risks.

The seed they planted so long ago allows us to enjoy the freedom we have today, but that freedom did not, and never will, come for free.

Partnership

“This partnership is a small step in reducing the size of state government, but it’s a giant step forward for taxpayers,” said Commissioner Hugh Weathers. “When government works together, the taxpayers win.”

The suggested number of Human Resource staff is one per hundred employees. Combining this administrative function between the two agencies, Commissioner Weathers and Treasurer Chellis are reducing the number of staff while improving the quality of services by hiring qualified professionals to oversee the needs of the workforce.

The two agencies are located in the same building and will be utilizing the "best practices" of each office to ensure that the new joint Human Resource Department will work efficiently to benefit the agencies.

During the past year, each of the two agencies has found ways to achieve tax dollar savings. Treasurer Chellis cut waste in his office, then cut his budget by $100,000 annually. Commissioner Weathers initiated a private public partnership solution for the new State Farmers Market, reducing the state's costs by over $20 million.

Wal-Mart stores will display Certified SC Grown signage in all of their SC stores making it easy for buyers to identify locally grown produce and products. "We work hard every day to save our customers money - when fruits and vegetables travel less distance, saving energy and providing fresh produce right from SC farmers - it's a win for all involved," said Patsy Williams, Market Manager for Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. in the Midlands of SC. "Wal-Mart really embraced this program last year and we continue to hear from our customers how much they appreciate the opportunity to buy local," Williams added.

In 2008, Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. spent over $662 million for merchandise and services with 810 suppliers in South Carolina sourcing millions in peaches, cantaloupes, bell peppers, squash, corn, tomatoes, and watermelon from South Carolina farmers to supply stores across the United States.

This promotional campaign is an extension of the SCDA's Certified South Carolina program, an exciting cooperative effort among producers, processors, wholesalers, retailers and the SCDA, to brand and promote SC produce and products. The program is based on the idea that when presented with the option, South Carolinians will buy local because- Nothing's Fresher, Nothing's Finer than South Carolina products and produce.

Additional information about the SCDA and its branding programs, including a Certified SC Grown directory, may be found online at www.agriculture.sc.gov and www.certifiedscgrown.com.

The FFA, originally known as the Future Farmers of America, is a national organization of more than 500,000 members in more than 7000 chapters located in all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. They are enrolled in agricultural education courses in secondary schools, community colleges and universities.

Many of these students are preparing for one of the more than 300 career opportunities in the science, business or technology of agriculture. American agriculture is the largest industry in the nation employing twenty percent of the total work force.

The mission of the FFA is to make a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership, personal growth and career success through Agricultural Education.

State delegates

“Our outlook in South Carolina is in good hands with future leaders like these,” Weathers said. “I really enjoyed sitting and chatting with these two young people.”

Each year, more than 1,500 young men and women from across the state descend on the Capitol City for the week-long program designed to teach them about our governmental system and the politics that make it run. They are selected by their teachers and counselors to attend, and it is an honor to be chosen as a delegate. Only those with outstanding qualities of leadership, character, scholarship, loyalty and service to their schools and community are considered for selection. Boys State is held at USC while Girls State is held at Columbia College.

Boys and Girls State is called a “Laboratory of Government,” because during the week, these young men and women have the opportunity to run for and be elected to mock political offices ranging from city level to State Constitutional Offices such as Lieutenant Governor and Governor. It is considered to be as much leadership training as it is an opportunity to learn about and participate in government and politics.

The Girls State delegates also attended an ice cream social hosted by the Department of Agriculture on June 13.

In addition to thanking those who serve or have served in the armed forces to preserve our freedom, we can thank our farmers, too.

A nation must be able to feed itself and, as we have painfully come to realize, fuel itself to be truly free. Thanks to the American farmer, we are a free nation because of a sustainable food supply. For generations, farmers across this state and nation have provided a safe and stable source of food, fiber, and now fuel. And all this from less than two percent of our country's population, providing for the other 98 percent. Our food is the safest and healthiest in the world, and it starts with the farmer and involves the partnerships we call the agribusiness industry.

Our true independence is certainly being challenged by gas prices that have gotten significantly higher in the past couple of years and in particular the last few months. Agriculture is one of the answers to our dependence on foreign oil and $4 plus gasoline. Our future energy will come from a host of new sources - the sky in terms of solar, the wind, and from the soil. The effort to create safe, reliable fuel sources using traditional and non-traditional crops is well underway. Ethanol and biodiesel are two ways farmers have already made an impact on our nation's fuel supply and prices.

Let me give you one example of making a difference with biofuels. Todd Hipp along with his brothers Chad and Eric in Saluda County are exclusively using on-road biodiesel in their trucks used in their forestry herbicide business. Chevy, Ford and Dodge, as well as their Kenworth 18-wheelers are all running 'independently' on biodiesel. Todd says he thinks it is the right thing to do and, at the same time, it keeps farmers farming. He sees more people taking advantage of using biodiesel and more uses for it as well. He is also looking at future opportunities to use wind power to generate electricity for his home.

Biofuels are here and now, but there is a future in cellulosic biofuels such as wood, grasses, and other biomass materials. Corn ethanol is the first generation, but we'll see other sources of ethanol and sustainable biofuels in the future. In neighboring Georgia, Range Fuels is a $200 million enterprise that will develop ethanol from pine trees. We have plenty of those in South Carolina. I've heard it said that the Southeast will be the Saudi Arabia of biomass. I look forward to that.

Now, while you're enjoying that sweet South Carolina peach on the 4th, here is something for you to think about. Doctor Caye Drapcho at Clemson's College of Agriculture in the biosystems engineering department is working on something that may put South Carolina agriculture on the green cutting edge. South Carolina growers harvest nearly 200 million pounds of peaches annually, and Dr. Drapcho says that an estimated 20 million pounds of peaches are not used for commercial use each year. Peaches are loaded with sugars that can be converted to hydrogen gas with the help of bacteria. Dr. Drapcho's research is showing that the hydrogen gas can be used in hydrogen fuel cells. The short-term goal is to create a pilot program for peach farmers or packers to have an onsite bio-reactor to make their own energy. They could either use it for their own energy needs or sell it back to their power company. Who knew that peaches could be used to turn on a light bulb? I bet it's a nice feeling to have the power company owe you money.

Doctor Terry Walker at Clemson is also working on another project that converts peaches into ethanol. Maybe one day we can fill up our cars with ethanol made from South Carolina peaches. We all know the most delicious way to convert peaches into energy-eat one! South Carolina grown peaches help maintain good health, and because the trip from tree to table is shorter, they reduce the carbon footprint helping maintain a healthy environment. The real reason to buy Certified South Carolina grown peaches is because "Nothing's sweeter. Nothing's tastier."

Independence Day, July 4th, we celebrate the birth of our nation. I am thankful for those first farmers who helped plant the seed of independence in 1776. I am equally proud of my fellow farmers whose independent attitude helps us keep our food freedom and will help us gain ground on our fuel freedom.

Happy Birthday, America!

Hugh E. Weathers, Commissioner
